FROM THE EDITOR

I his is the last issue of 2020. Looking back, I see I was too optimistic about this year in my comments in our January/February edition. However, I don't think anyone could have foreseen the year we have had. So, here's hoping we all have a better 2021!.

We welcome Bud Mayo to our pages with his article on Joseph Carrington Mayo, War Mayor of Richmond. How the civil officials faced the difficulties of running their cities during wartime is an issue which doesn't get a lot of attention, especially in the capital city of Richmond, VA. This is a very informative article I think you will enjoy.

Often times our enemies grasp at straws to attack us. One straw is a quote from General Lee about monuments always taken out of context. Ernest Blevins shares his article What Robert E. Lee Actually Said About Monuments in this issue. This is a good look at what General Lee actually said and what he was referring to when he said it. We all need more ammunition to use in our battles to preserve our heritage.

Who knew there are four Confederate generals buried in Woodlawn Cemetery located in New York City? Harlan Whatley's article on The Four Generals of Woodlawn tells us all about how this came to be. This interesting article shows how Confederate history is American history.

Compatriot Sean R. Goodman shares the story of his ancestor with his article Henry Clay Goodman, A Tribute to the Life and Service of a Confederate Soldier. Ancestor stories are always informative and give us a glimpse of some of their experiences as they fought for the Cause.

And finally, the 2020 Christmas Gift Catalog from Headquarters is included in the last five pages of this issue. Of course, this doesn't include all the items available, but it is a good start and you can refer to our website for more gift items.

As always, I would like to wish everyone a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

Until then, I remain,

Yours in the Cause,

Editor-in-Chief

"What Have YOU Done For The SCV Lately?"

ecently, I have been bombarded by messages from people wondering, "Where is the SCV? Why are they not protecting our monuments? When are they going to fight back?" Those questions can be a double-edged sword because, I would have to ask, "What are you doing?" Yes, it is frustrating, and I get angry too when our monuments are taken down, but the National Organization cannot take on every monument fight. That is the frustrating part. What are your Divisions doing on the state levels? What are your Brigades doing? Better yet, what is your camp doing? It is easy to gripe, blame, and point fingers, but how does that solve the problem at hand when all it really does is cause confusion and divisiveness in the ranks. Instead of tearing ourselves down, we need to work together as a "Band of Brothers" like our ancestors did those many years ago.

Yes, its frustrating, because each member of this great organization feels our heritage is worth fighting for, and you should. But there are right ways and wrong ways to fight these battles. We all should concentrate our efforts on our various levels of involvement to get the maximum effort out of our membership. Some camps focus on their counties to protect their monuments and go to city and county meetings to speak out. Division leaders are focusing on Division level issues at hand.

So, you may ask, what is National doing? Recently in the last issue of the Confederate Veteran, I ordered the printing of cards to be mailed by you, the membership, thanking President Trump for his support in preventing the name change of military bases which bear our Confederate heroes' names. Did you send them in, or are they still in your magazine? These cards were designed to put pressure on the Department of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

I have also created a military "watchdog" committee of retired military personnel who keep me informed on the happenings in Washington, especially if the issues are related to moves against our heritage. Did you promote the press release I sent out in August on the local and state levels about the DoD? The US DoD is unfortunately leading the movement on renaming military installations. They are rationalizing the renaming for two primary reasons: 1) Confederates were "traitors" and, 2) Confederate soldiers fought for slavery. These reasons are totally incorrect and so far, we have been able to keep them at bay with our press release bringing unwanted attention to them about this issue. So far, President Trump has supported our cause on this. This is another reason why you should send those cards in.

I also called to "arms our members" to contact their Representative and Senators in General Order #2 to safeguard our National Military Parks. The House of Representatives passed H.R. 7608, (proposed 2020 Appropriation of Department of the Interior) which will destroy all Confederate memorials in the National Park Service. At this time, H.R. 7608, the most recent and shockingly egregious act of cultural genocide since the founding of the Taliban, has made it to the US Senate. Let me quote from the act itself, under the heading: Removal of Confederate Commemorative Works 7, Sec. 442: "Within 180 days of enactment of this Act, the National Park Service shall remove from display all physical Confederate commemorative works, such as statues, monuments, sculptures, memorials, and plaques...." Did you make a call, e-mail, or write your representatives to express your displeasure on this issue? Currently, because of many of you, this bill is not going to be addressed in the Senate, but who knows when it could rear its ugly head again.

Many of us on the National level have been bombarded by the press because they want our views on various issues. This is unprecedented. In the past we had to chase after the press, now they come to us. In the first two weeks I was in office, I was interviewed ten times, some of them I had to ask others to do because I could not fit it in my schedule and because those people were better than I to speak on the subject. We are gaining ground, and yet it seems like we are moving at a snail's pace, but public opinion is slowly but surely coming our direction because people are tired of what is taking place. They are starting to realize this is an attack on "American History" not just Confederate. One may even go so far as to say it is the "sanitizing" of history.

I read an article recently that ISIS destroyed in 2015 more than 24 historical monuments which were thousands of years old just because they did not agree with them. Surely freedom-loving Americans do not want to destroy their heritage. We must continue to present the face that "WE ARE THE VICTIMS." This is how public opinion can be persuaded our way, but we also must keep up the offensive. Have you joined "Make Dixie Great Again?" This is a great way to continue the fight as we blast the air waves with our message through social media, radio, and videos which flood the internet. Have you shared this information with others on social media when requested? Have you reupped your membership so your dollars are used "like bullets," to fight political correctness and Marxism?

We must push the "AS THEY TAKE THEM DOWN, WE PUT THEM BACK UP" mentality. By the time you read this, the Jefferson Davis statue which was taken down in Memphis, Tennessee, has been restored. My praise and admiration to all those who were involved in restoring this monument. It is now on display at Elm Springs as part of the beautification of the museum which had been planned to incorporate a statue of our president. Other reports are coming in that camps and Divisions are acquiring statues and monuments which were removed and placing them on private land. This is what we do gentlemen and, in this day, and age, it is the only way we can guarantee the protection of those memorials.

Had ancestors on both sides at Camp Morton

To the Editor:

I just finished reading Melinda Lane's article on Camp Morton, a hell on earth to a lot of good men. She speaks of the first commandant, Richard Owen taking better care of the prisoners than the commandants after him. I have to wonder if it's because the time he was there had to do with the camp also being used as an exchange camp? I had an ancestor in the 9th Indiana captured at the Battle of Richmond, KY, spent time there in the fall of 1862 after his regiment was paroled.

She also speaks of one commandant who would refuse to let the prisoners take the oath of allegiance. On this I have another ancestor's records of the 48th TN, captured in Lawrence County, TN, sent to Pulaski in late 1863, then sent on to Camp Morton arriving there in December. I can't recall the date he tried to take the oath, but I do remember the commandant wrote it was denied due to him not believing he would honor it after being released. This same ancestor died in March 1865 of dysentery and now lies in an unmarked grave in Crown Hill Cemetery.

Monument at Camp Morton recently removed

To the Editor:

The article on Camp Morton, the US Prison, was well written. I joined the SCV on a great-great grandfather's service in the 1st Confederate Cavalry. He and his brother were at Camp Morton. His brother died in his arms, of pneumonia. A 1912 monument was erected with the names of the dead.

In 2015 a local observed me place a Battle Flag there, and complimented me. In June Indianapolis removed the monument. At least one resident doesn't view me as an enemy.

There was a Confederate Air Force during WWII

To the Editor:

Like the last issue, this current Issue of Confederate Veteran was truly superb. I was struck by a letter to the Editor from Compatriot Ken Murphy about the need for a "Confederate Air Force." Mr. Murphy would do well to read the all-true and hilarious book The Sword Over the Mantel, by J. Bryan III. It tells the heart-warming story of how a squadron of USMC pilots — Southerners all — formed their own"Confederate Air Force" in the South Pacific Theater during WWII.

The rest of the book is also autobiographical, and tells about what Bryan's 100 percent unreconstructed ancestors and kinfolks told him about the WBTS.

All for a Confederate 'Air Cavalry'

To the Editor:

I read Ken Murphy's letter in the September/October issue of the Confederate Veteran. He proposes the establishment of a "Rebel Air Force" (R.A.F.). Being an aircraft owner, pilot, and life member of the SCV I am certainly in favor of such a concept. The Confederacy made use of aeronautics so why shouldn't the SCV? Note, however, that our British cousins and fellow compatriots in the United Kingdom may object to the use of the abbreviation "RAF" because these particular letters have represented the Royal Air Force for decades.

SCV has a Mechanized Cavalry, with which I also maintain membership, so why should an aerial cavalry faction not exist? Perhaps an image of the mythological horse Pegasus could be incorporated into a logo?

"Air Cavalry" divisions are considered to be essential components by the US Army for effective warfare, and SCV-marked and operated aircraft would undeniably be beneficial marketing weapons for the organization in the ongoing educational battles against political correctness and historical ignorance. Equipped with flying machines, officially sanctioned aviators and supporters could "mount up with wings as eagles" to spread the gospel truths. Thus, it would be prudent for SCV to test fly such a proposal.

Last cover made great cultural representation

To the Editor:

The cover of the September/October 2020 Confederate Veteran had an excellent artistic representation of the Confederate flag in the context of cultural and public celebration. Artistic expression is powerfully persuasive. Leftists know this and therefore seek to "(c)ontinue discrediting American culture by degrading all forms of artistic expression." Congressman Albert Sydney Herlong, Jr. of Florida, a great-grandson of a veteran of Hampton's Legion, included those words in the Congressional Record (109 Cong. Rec. – Appendix A35 (1963)) as part of a list of Marxist goals in America. A related item from this list is the elimination of "all good sculpture from parks and buildings," which the Talibanesque attacks on monuments to Southern heroes fulfill.

Exaltation of our culture through different means is part of a response to the stygian wave of ignorance in America today. It may not make an impression on mobs who hate the South because they are really raging at their own rootless mediocrity, but people of good will can find encouragement.

Eyewitness to CSA Flag flying at Okinawa

To the Editor:

Our September/October 2020 magazine article "When Rebel Was Cool" is a truly enjoyable read. As i review our bi-monthly magazine I regularly share with my veteran relatives and friends. I had heard the story of a Confederate Flag being raised during a major battle on Okinawa (page 20, just below the Dixie Division uniform patch). As we were discussing this article I had the privilege of hearing more on this flag raising from an actual participant during this critical battle.

The mission was to advance and capture the Japanese fortress Shuri castle, one of the last Okinawa strongholds. The mission was carried out by the 1st Marine Battalion, 1st Marine Division and lead by then Captain Julian Dusenbury. In completing this mission the only flag available to raise came from Captain Dusenbury who carried the Confederate Battle Flag folded in his helmet. This flag was raised as Shuri castle was captured late May, 1945. Captain Julian Dusenbury was wounded during this battle several times and never was able to walk again. During his military career he was awarded the Navy Cross, Silver Star, and Purple Heart. A Clemson graduate and confined to a wheelchair for life he went on to serve two terms in the South Carolina House of Representatives.

This added information is provided by then 1st Battalion, 1st Marine Division executive officer 2nd Lieutenant Lou Schott who participated in this critical mission. Colonel Lou Schott (retired) was also wounded during the Pacific Theater battles. Now at his young age of 100 years he often participates and speaks at veteran organizations and other military services.

Internet searches will show pictures of this flag raising with additional heroic details.

Appeasement — A loser now as then

To the Editor:

"Peace in our time," said Neville Chamberlain, as he waved a paper signed by Adolph Hitler on his return from Munich 30 September, 1938.

It has been nearly 82 years since British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain returned from his peace mission to Germany. His meeting with Adolph Hitler, Fuhrer of the Third Reich, gave the Nazis control of the Sudetenland, that part of Czechoslovakia closest to Germany, and the only part which was defensible.

Waving a scrap of paper, signed as an afterthought by the Fuhrer, proclaimed he held in his hand an agreement which guaranteed "Peace in our time." Many citizens of Great Britain breathed a sigh of relief. They believed that "Good old Neville" had rescued them from another continental conflict just twenty years after WWI. That had been a bloodbath, costing England nearly one million lives.

It is somewhat understandable the British were happy to avoid another war, especially one which would be sure to cost them more casualties than the last. The implements of death and destruction had made huge leaps forward. Science was much more advanced. The ability to roll over adversaries with improved armor, planes and bombs was a terrifying possibility, to say nothing of the development of the V-1 and V-2 flying bombs and nuclear weapons.

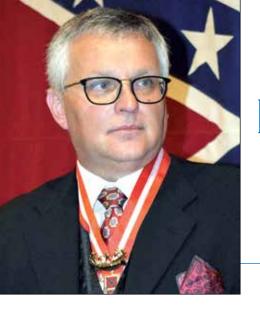

The Great Depression had struck Europe as hard as it had the United States. Disarmament was often the first answer to the increased need for Social Services. The poor had to be fed. Millions were left unemployed. The unemployment levels of the 1930s has never been matched.

Winston Churchill saw what few others were able to recognize. War was coming. Hitler, in violation of the Treaty of Versailles, was rearming Germany as rapidly. At first Germany tried to hide what they were doing. As their lead in air power, advanced armor, larger battleships, and tactics grew over the former allied powers grew, the leaders of France and Great Britain tried to negotiate with the German maniac. The French were saddled with weak leadership and revolving governments. The British was led by men who refused to see the writing on the wall. They deceived themselves and worse yet, they deceived their own people.

By the mid 1930s Churchill and his friends in Parliament were able to wrangle some concession from Prime Ministers Stanley Baldwin and Neville Chamberlain. It would take a long time and much suffering before the British could engage the Germans and anything resembling parity in the air and on the ground and the only way the British could compete in ground troops was with the help of the Dominions. Thank God, Australia, New Zealand, India and Canada, among others, answered England's call.

Nature and Purpose and the Shopping Cart Test

irst thing I wish to say is a big "Thank You" to the men of our organization who have performed the task of writing an article for our magazine. For me, it is harder than I imagined. Partly due to the day-to-day changing landscape and what do I say about it or do I say anything at all because it feels like I am preaching to the choir. Sometimes the choir needs a tune-up but every one of you know the situation. Partly due to the thought process of how do I tie all of these thoughts together and make sense. I have started and changed this article four times so far. As far as turning it in on time: I am not as late as I was with the first one. My plan is to continue to improve and with the multiple unfinished articles, I have a head start on the next.

The shopping cart test part of the title is due to my wife returning home from grocery shopping today and talking about someone leaving a shopping cart in a parking space and it had rolled against a car. Shopping cart returns were just a few feet away and a row of cars over. To use the parking space, someone was going to have to get out of the car and put up the cart someone else had used. Plus, someone now has a ding in their car from the rolling cart.

Some of you might have heard of the shopping cart test. Some people consider it a test on the quality of a person. Some people consider it a test on the capability of someone to handle self-government. Some people just consider it as the right thing to do. The theory of the test is; the act of returning a shopping cart is a simple task and follows the principle of using something multiple people use and when you have finished your use; putting it where it should be. You are not awarded for returning the cart. Likewise, you are not punished if you don't return the cart. So people consider it the test if someone will do the right thing regardless of the outcome.

Do you return the shopping cart? Do you fuss if someone doesn't? Do you consider it selfish, lazy or non-caring when someone just walks off and leaves someone to clean up after them? Are you willing to take the extra time and effort to finish your task and finish it correctly? Does it reflect upon the nature of the person either way? If someone doesn't care enough about doing their duty, can they be trusted enough to self-govern? All valid questions, but where do you stand?

In my last article, I wrote about hope not being a plan; I must do more. So, the first thing I decided to do is revisit our SCV Constitution and develop a better understanding of our rules and procedures. The SCV Constitution can be found on the scv.org website under resources and SCV Constitution. To begin with, I found our Preamble to be thought provoking by mentioning the Magna Carta and Great Charter of England granted at Runnymede, AD 1215; just to name a couple. Tremendous thought and detail went in to just the Preamble.

One thing that struck me because of recent events is on page 4 of the SCV Constitution.

2. NATURE & PURPOSE

2.1. The Sons of Confederate Veterans, in furtherance of the Charge of Lieutenant General Stephen D. Lee, shall be strictly patriotic, historical, educational, fraternal, benevolent, non-political, non-racial and non-sectarian. The Sons of Confederate Veterans neither embraces, nor espouses acts or ideologies of racial and religious bigotry, and further, condemns the misuse of its sacred symbols and flags in the conduct of same. Each member is expected to perform his full duty as a citizen according to his own conscience and understanding.

It clearly states in our SCV Constitution who and what we are. I asked myself if I was following our guidelines. If I am going to do more, I must do more the right way. I need to improve my educational knowledge. I must educate myself before I can educate others. I know one place I am clearly lacking is a thorough knowledge of the US Constitution and the founding principles of this Nation. I recently saw a couple of videos on Facebook of Army of Tennessee Councilman Carl Jones debating and trying to educate people who had asked him to come to a rally. He mentioned the Federalist Papers; and yes, I have heard of them and read some, but not nearly enough; so I have started reading them. During that process I came across the Anti-Federalist papers and I know nothing from those, but my thought was, do I need to get acquainted with them to be able to know what is coming before it gets there and isn't that a battle plan?

Where do you stand in knowing about our SCV Constitution? Are you like me and need to improve in some aspect defined in our Nature and Purpose? If you are like me, what is your plan?

Another plan of mine is to improve myself in parliamentary procedure and Roberts Rules of Order as this is the procedure for properly conducting business. The classes might not be cheap and take time but making mistakes can be more expensive. Getting things done is a must and getting things done right is the plan and the goal.

If I can improve myself anyone can. It is just a simple choice, like putting up the shopping cart. My plan to improve myself began with me knowing I need to understand our organization better and conduct business better. Doing these things better helps me do the job you need me to.

My plan is to work on getting artifacts in the museum as soon as possible. The retention ponds are completed and our Certificate of Occupancy is on the soon to see horizon. We have a gentleman who is making us a special cabinet and he is the gentleman who built the one already in the conference room in Elm Springs. Placing cabinets and artifacts in the museum and getting ready for the opening is next. However, paying for the museum is an absolute must and is foremost in my thoughts. Several small things are being planned and those will be coming about shortly. Much work is to be done and it is my duty to do my part.

I wrote about hope not being a plan. Although hope is not a plan, I am optimistic. We have to believe and hope the outcome we desire will happen, because if we do not believe, we will not work hard enough to achieve our goals. I am optimistic because I know we are right; even though being right does not always get you the results you want. Work hard, develop a plan, put your head down, do the work and please put up your shopping cart.

AN EDITORIAL FROM THE CHIEF OF
HERITAGE OPERATIONS
WALTER D. KENNEDY

The Stab in the Back

It has often been said, "A pretended friend is worse than an avowed enemy." The actions of the feeble and submissive "conservative" members of the Mississippi legislature as they abandoned the REAL Mississippi flag, is a recent example of the veracity of that statement. Mississippi's example, along with South Carolina's political whore, Nikki Haley's example, is proof positive that we, as Southern Rights advocates, must do much more to advance our pro-South narrative.

Think of what would happen when feeble and submissive "conservative leaders" recognize that we, members of the SCV, are now a powerful force for Southern Rights. Think of the positive results for our Cause when weak, feeble, and submissive politicians recognize they must deal faithfully with us or face a loud public outcry which will resonate at the ballot box! They may not like us but if they fear what we can do because of our influence, they will hesitate to "stab us in the back" as they have done so often in the past. As John C. Calhoun noted, "Power can only be resisted by power and tendency by tendency." We must be that counter power and tendency or else we will continue to get more Nikki Haley type of results!

There is an obvious question to be asked: How does the SCV offer a counter power and tendency? This can only be done if the SCV, from top leadership to the newest camp member, dedicate themselves to engaging our neo-Marxist enemies in a battle they are not prepared to fight. Here is how you and your camp can strike back at our enemies. Every two months during the year (unless prevented by a pandemic or a natural disaster), the Confederate Legion sponsors a Confederate Counter-Attack. For example, during November and December we will attack FALSE HISTORY by informing the public about the REAL first Thanksgiving and Christmas in Dixie. Several sixty second radio ads will be produced and the Confederate Legion will purchase air time on many radio stations promoting this effort. These ads will point the general public to our Make Dixie Great Again website where videos and articles are available which point out how the South has become the subject of FALSE HISTORY. This false history is used by neo-Marxists to support their effort of Southern cultural genocide. These ads will also inform the public how to contact the SCV and why we all should be proud of our Southern heritage.

What the national SCV, via the Confederate Legion, is doing in selected radio markets, local camps can also do in their market area. Every SCV Camp is encouraged to download these radio ads (found on Make Dixie Great Again website) and purchase air time in their local market area. We will also post sample letters SCV Camps can download and send to local social groups and political leaders. Remember, many of these people will not even know who and what the SCV is all about. By communicating with civic, social, religious, and political groups, we will increase the general public's knowledge about us. We are creating and publishing pamphlets and handouts such as the 'Southern

You can make a difference
by joining the
Confederate
Legion and insisting your camp participates in these
Confederate
Counter-Attacks.

Defender' to help get our message and name out. The 'Southern Defender' can be inserted in the local newspaper, given out at gun shows, living history events, or just simply left in every waiting room in your area. A BIG plus generated by these efforts is the political establishment — such as the spineless "feeble and submissive" representatives in the Mississippi legislature — will be put on notice that we are building a large fighting force to defend and promote our Rights. Until these feeble and submissive politicians fear what we can do to them, they will continue to be unfaithful friends or more correctly just a simple "pretended friend." These pretended friends love us for our votes but don't want to be seen or associated with us — this must and will change!

Every two months the Confederate Legion sends out e-mail alerts to SCV camps asking each camp to become an activist camp in this effort. If every SCV camp would do so, within the next two or three years, the name of the SCV would become a recognized force, respected by and loved by the 70 percent of Southerners who already agree with us, and, most importantly, feared by the pretended friends of the South. We can make a difference but only if we become activists in the Cause of the South. Although celebrating our ancestor's courage and dedication is honorable, being courageous and dedicated to vindicating the Cause for which they fought is what we are called to do — remember General S. D. Lee's Charge to us. You can make a difference by joining the Confederate Legion and insisting your camp participates in these Confederate Counter-Attacks. At the next meeting of your camp, inquire of the camp leadership if they are getting a current e-mail alert from the Confederate Legion. Make the membership aware about what is going on with these counter-attacks and ask about what your camp needs to be doing this month to promote the current counter-attack.

As we have insisted from day one of this "take back the narrative" effort, it is more than Confederate monuments and Southern history under attack. A full blown "cancel culture" effort is underway in modern America. The first culture targeted by these left-wing cancel culture loons is of course Southern Culture. The cancel culture movement goes by many names: cultural cleansing, cultural genocide, or just political correctness. Regardless of what we call this plague on the right of free expression and speech, it is totally anti-American. Traditional values as embraced by those who hold dear a Biblical world view and strict-construction Constitutionalism are anathema to left-wing looters and other progressives. Those attacking traditional American values from the Ten Commandments to Confederate monuments may call themselves "progressives" but at bottom they are neo-Marxists. Their ultimate goal is the destruction of Western Civilization along with Traditional American Values including our freedom and liberty. Americans must be taught that if the neo-Marxist can have a Confederate monument or flag removed because it "offends" someone, the same thing will happen to the display of a Christmas Nativity Scene, a Christian flag, or the display of the Ten Commandments when these items "offend" the right person.

The South's firm stand for States' Rights is the one great reason neo-Marxist continue their attack upon all things Southern. This is not something new. In 1894 Robert Ingersoll, a secular human-

The Southern Code

Please enter with me into the antebellum era as we try to get an idea of the atmosphere of the South. That era saw a movement of God and a removal of skepticism from its midst. One writer explained the reason for this purge as an attack of "the evangelists of the Great Revival."All known skeptics were removed from Southern institutions during this era. The groves and altars, as it were, were removed from the land. There was sensitivity to the God of the Bible who manifested Himself in three persons, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Men were being moved to believe Jeremiah's words, "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord....Blessed is the man who trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is. For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit. The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it? I the LORD search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings." There were many who embraced the Lord Jesus Christ by faith; these took sides with God against sin, especially their personal sin. Clement Eaton, writing to clarify the issue, penned, "The ... consciousness of sin in antebellum America was the resurgence of Calvinism with its great emphasis on the depravity of the human nature." W. J. Cash wrote, "The South, men said and did not doubt, was peculiarly Christian; probably, indeed, it was the last great bulwark of Christianity. From the pulpit the word went forth that infidelity and a new paganism masking under the name of Science were sweeping the world." There was a spiritual alertness which marked the culture for great good. Thus orthodox Christianity permeated the Southern culture and Unitarianism, Deism, and other groups were routed out. For example, one of the skeptics on the faculty of the University of Virginia, J. A. G. Davis, was born again and professed faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Southern Code must be viewed from the perspective of a Southern culture. Christian culture does not mean everyone was a Christian, but Christian principles were the order of that culture. Along with the depravity of man the divine solution was introduced as the saving grace of Jesus Christ and was preeminently presented by Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians, and others.

What was the Southern Code as held by our forefathers? In the most basic understanding, it meant the obligation to nobility. This was a powerful concept which was an adaptation of noblesse oblige. As one Southern writer reminds, "Ideas have consequences!" What a person actually believes is expressed in his behavior. Therefore, one's belief system has a major impact on that person and his influence. The antebellum person in Southern history was impacted by the concept which was permeated that Christian culture. The idea is The Southern Code. Consider the words W. J. Cash wrote regarding the South in The Mind of the South, "No group of people anywhere, indeed, ever more constantly represented to themselves and to the world that they were absolutely under the domination of these ideas and the Christian virtues, to which they wedded them; no group ever more completely contracted the habit of referring every act to these motives, of performing even the most commonplace of deeds only to the accompaniment of solemn protestations of selfless devotion; and no group was ever more convinced that it was all so."

As previously pointed out, one of the premiere ideas practiced in the Old South was that which especially permeated all classes of Southern society in the antebellum period. Noblesse oblige was the idea that there is an obligation to nobleness. In most societies noblesse oblige related to those born to privilege and their responsibility to give back to the society of their birth; but this idea in the South was exhibited through the prism of Christianity and was applied to a broader sphere than the privileged. There was an exalted sense of honor, and in its practical side it levied a sense of responsibility for public good through personal service. This quest was considered the aim of persons of integrity. There was a high sense of Christian responsibility or the responsibility of man to God, and not to self.

The creation mandate was taken more seriously, And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth" (Genesis 1:28). Confederate soldier and subsequent Baptist minister and educator B. H. Carroll put it, "The dominion of man is as broad as his commission." There was this sense of responsibility to God as Creator and the serving of Him as the Redeemer.

This sense of honor seemed to permeate the South. The Southern sense of noblesse oblige went beyond its European stricture to noblemen, and was practiced by the society in general. William Thomson, the Scottish wool carder, traveled in the Southern States from 1840 to 1842 seeking work, and he reported the mechanics and tradesmen in the South considered themselves as "men of honor," and they resented any indignity that be done toward themselves "even at the expense of their life, or of those who venture to insult them." This sense of honor or the Southern Code was not just related to personal or family honor, but it was sectional as well. Therefore, being a Christian gentleman, a man of honor, a guardian of the family name, a protector of ladies and children, a custodian of Biblical principles, or having any other noble obligation were all a part of being a proper person. There is no possible way to understand the behavior of Southern men or women without a grasp of the concept of the Southern Code which was instilled from childhood. There was the rule of the sense of right as God determined right.

Observers outside the culture of the South often considered the Southern man a ruffian because of his behavior; but they missed or ignored the motivation behind the behavior. A man without honor was considered as no man at all; and the loss of honor was considered an evidence of poor character and was life-destructive. One writer (A. James Fuller) put the matter well, "honor was a system of ethics which influenced everything from family life to t the beginning of the war few Southern states had militia or volunteer dress regulations. The governors quickly prescribed a dress code which military units found hard to fulfill. When cloth got short in supply for frock coats, fatigue shirts were substituted by the states.

The 12th MS was organized at Corinth in May 1861. In July they arrived at Manassas, Virginia but not in time to take part in the battle. After being assigned to Rhodes' Brigade, they were quartered near Centerville.

In April 1862, the 12th was sent to the Virginia Peninsula as part of D. H. Hill's Division. With more than 1,000 men enlisted, they were one of the largest regiments in the army. At the Battle of Seven Pines, May 31-June 1, they captured Federal rifle pits with their colonel being mentioned for gallantry. Here they lost 41 killed and 152 wounded.

On June 9 the 12th became part of the 2nd Mississippi Brigade of General Featherston. At Gaines' Mill (June 27) the 12th captured a Federal battery and was commanded by Captain Thomas due to the wounding of the commanding officers. At Frasier's Farm they lost 34 killed, 186 wounded and five missing but the Peninsula Campaign was over for the 12th and Richmond was safe.

Soldier in fatigue shirt issued to Mississippi and Louisiana troops in 1861.

On August 20 they became part of Wilcox's Division of Long-streets' Corps. The following day the 12th repulsed a cavalry charge at Kelly's Ford with the regiment being commended for its gallantry. They fought at Second Manassas on August 30 near the stone house.

With Colonel Taylor again in command of the 12th, they reached Sharpsburg, Maryland, on September 17. Positioned south of the Sunken Road, they supported D. H. Hill's Division until forced back along the Hagerstown Pike. The regiment lost six killed and 53 wounded.

In November, Featherston's Brigade was assigned to Anderson's Division of Longstreet's Corps.

During the Battle of Fredericksburg on December 13 the 12th lost eight men wounded by artillery fire. Next they were part of Stonewall Jackson's flanking march at Chancellorsville on May 1, 1863 and on May 3 drove Union forces from their works losing three killed, 38 wounded and 23 missing.

At Gettysburg the 12th had only 305 men on the field due to casualties in the ranks from battles and hard campaigning. Throughout the battle they were held in reserve losing only one killed and six wounded.

They saw no further action until October 14 when they fought at Bristoe Station and during the Mine Run Campaign in November.

In the Battle of the Wilderness they protected the divisions' flank, May 5-6, 1864. The 12th fought at the Bloody Angle inside the Muleshoe, holding it all day until a relief line could be made in

Joseph Carrington Mayo, War Mayor of Richmond

By Commander Bud Mayo, Frank Stringfellow Camp 822, Fairfax, VA

oseph Carrington Mayo held one of the most challenging and demanding civilian jobs in the Confederate States of America. As mayor of Richmond from 1853 to 1868, he orchestrated the needs of Richmond and deftly handled the demands of the Confederate States of America, which moved to Richmond on May 29, 1861.

Mayo's family ties in Richmond ran deep. He was born on November 16, 1795, at Rock Spring in Powhatan County. He was a member of one of Richmond's most distinguished families. His great-grandfather, Major William Mayo, was the surveyor who laid out the plans for the city in 1737. His brother, Colonel John Mayo, built Mayo's Bridge which spanned the James River.

Prior to becoming mayor he served as a lieutenant in the 19th Regiment in the War of 1812. Mayo was admitted to the bar in 1820. He was a member of the city council for 13 years and represented Richmond in the House of Delegates from 1846-1850. He was a practicing lawyer and authored A Guide to Magistrates. One of his notable accomplishments was improving the city reservoir and he was given the title "Father of the City Water Works."

Mayo presided over the city under a city charter which had been amended on March 18, 1861. The charter provided for an elected mayor, who resided at 212 Franklin Street. His office was in City Hall on 11th Street, between Broad and Capital. The Mayor's Court met daily at 9 AM. Most of the city government were also members of the city's upper class and spoke of themselves as "ladies and gentlemen."

Throughout the war years, Mayo balanced the needs of the city and state as well as the demands of the Confederate government. He faced the increasing needs of the citizenry which included the care of thousands of wounded Confederate soldiers, curtailing rampant crime, the black-market economy, gambling, prostitution, pickpockets, counterfeiters, thieves and meeting the needs of an increasing number of refugees flocking to the city. All of Richmond's citizens faced exorbitant food prices as the war progressed.

One of his biggest challenges was dealing with this increasing population in the city. During the war years, the population exploded from 38,000 to more than 100,000 at war's end. At any time 10,000-15,000 Confederate soldiers were in and around the city awaiting assignments.

Slaves and free Negroes were a continued focus of the mayor during the war years. Every effort was made to control any perceived unacceptable activity. Lashes were the order of the day for even minor infractions of the mayor's dicta. Drunken soldiers and quarrelling women filled the mayor's chamber. The mayor's stance on crime was popular among upper class citizens of Richmond but not well received by Negroes and lower-class whites.

Richmond during the war could easily be described as the Crime Capital of the Confederacy. Prostitution was an ongoing problem which plagued Richmond throughout the war years. Sidewalk ordinances were enacted and violators were brought before the Mayor's Court. The mayor regularly spent six days per week visiting police station houses to determine cases serious enough to be brought before him. The mayor's focus was on minor criminal violations. Whipping was a frequently utilized punishment. More serious cases and felonies were heard by an elected judge in the Hastings Court, which was the next level of the judiciary. Slaves and free Negroes were often punished by being sent to work on the city fortifications.

Gambling saloons were numerous in the city with nearly forty near the Exchange Hotel at 14th and Franklin Street alone. Mayor Mayo made numerous frustrating attempts to address the problem. When one saloon was shut down another would pop up. The gambling saloons were popular with high ranking civilian and military officers. Their presence complicated the problems of the city. Confederate Secretary of the Treasury Judah Benjamin was known to frequent them on a regular basis. Unfortunately, the mayor's efforts to curtail crime at the gambling saloons were mostly with laughs and indifference.

The failure of the city government to curtail crime reached a low point when Provost Marshall John Winder's home was burglarized. It was Winder's responsibility to protect life and property in the city.

By 1864 prices for food and supplies reached outrageous levels. Bacon was $20 per pound, flour $200 a barrel, butter $25 per pound and cord wood was $200 per cord. Confederate currency was virtually worthless in the marketplace.

On April 2, 1863, more than five hundred people assembled to demand food. Mayor Mayo addressed the crowd sternly to disperse them but was unsuccessful. Later large numbers of men looted shops nearby. Rioters carried off 310 pounds of beef from the City Hospital. It was not until Governor Letcher and President Jefferson Davis spoke before the crowd that they dispersed. A force of two battalions of the River Defense Force were alerted to stop any further demonstrations. The demonstration which came to be known as the "Bread Riot" signaled another example of the failure of the city, state and the Confederate governments to meet the needs of the citizens and keep the Confederate armies in the field fed. When Lee's lines around Petersburg could no longer be held, Jefferson Davis ordered Richmond to be evacuated. The Confederate government boarded trains south to Danville. The mayor and the city officials remained in Richmond.

The city council then appointed a commission of five men to join Mayor Mayo to carry a note of surrender to Federal forces. The group included three judges (John A. Meredith, W. H. Lyons and W. H. Haliburton) along with William McFarland, president of the VMI Board of Visitors and Lofton Elliot, a citizen. The surrender request was handwritten on wallpaper. On the morning of April 3, 1865, the mayor's group headed out of the city in a dilapidated hack flying a white flag. Three miles outside the city the mayor's party met with Union troops at the intersection of Osbourn Turnpike and New Market Road. Their first contact was with Majors Stephens and Graves of a Massachusetts Cavalry unit.

The surrender request clearly stated: To the General Commanding the United States Army in front of Richmond: The army of the Confederate Government having abandoned the City of Richmond, I respectfully request that you will take possession of it with an organized force, to preserve order and protect women and children and property. Respectfully, Joseph Mayo, Mayor. in just a few lines Mayo had said what he had earlier sworn not to do. The city was occupied by Union forces later that day.

After the surrender and occupation of Richmond the populace could not believe Mayo had been reappointed by Governor Pierpont to give stability to the city government. Pierpont had been serving as the recognized governor of loyalist Virginia during the war. Mayo's tenure as postwar mayor lasted until 1868. He was removed by Governor Pierpont on May 4, 1868, because of his harsh treatment of newly freed slaves. Negroes without passes again served their sentences at the whipping post. Upon his return to office, Mayo tried to return to business as usual. His actions were unacceptable to the newly-formed Freed-

MY FELLOW-CITIZENS, TO ARMS!

I have just received a message direct from the highest authority in the Confederacy, to call upon the Militia Organizations to come forth, and upon all other Citizens to organize Companies for the defense of this City against immediate attack of the enemy. They are approaching, and you may have to meet them before Monday morning. I can do no more than give you this warning of their near approach.

REMEMBER NEW ORLEANS!

Richmond is now in your hands. Let it not fall under the rule of another BUTLER. Rally, then, to your Officers to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, on BROAD STREET, in front of the CITY HALL.

men's Bureau and the occupying forces. The city which was the embodiment of the Confederacy was soon to be a thing of the past.

After leaving office, Mayo moved to Cumberland Landing in New Kent County, Virginia. He died on August 10, 1872. He was buried in Shockoe Cemetery in his beloved Richmond. His epitaph could have read: He died secure in his knowledge that he had given his all for Richmond and the Confederate States of America.

What Robert E. Lee Actually Said About Monuments

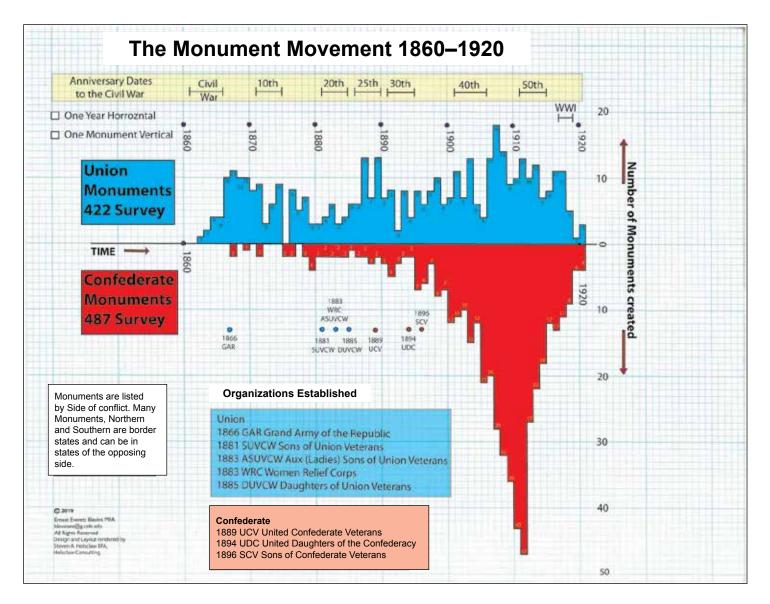

By Ernest Everett Blevins, MFA

onument removers like to cite a quote by Robert E. Lee on monuments. However, the context to which previously is not discussed.

General Robert E. Lee did have a quote on monuments. The letter cited is a decline to attend a meeting from the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association, which was chartered by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania on April 13, 1864, to preserve the Gettysburg Battlefield.

"Absence from Lexington has prevented my receiving until to-day your letter of the 26th [July 1869], inclosing (sic) an invitation from the Gettysburg Battle-field (sic) Memorial Association, to attend a meeting of the officers engaged in that battle at Gettysburg, for the purpose of marking upon the ground by enduring memorials of granite the positions and movements of the armies on the field. My engagements will not permit me to be present. I believe if there, I could not add anything material to the information existing on the subject. I think it wiser, moreover, not to keep open the sores of war but to follow the examples of those nations who endeavored to obliterate the marks of civil strife, to commit to oblivion the feelings engendered."

Context means everything. Out of 423 Union monuments in the Blevins study for Forever in Mourning: Union and Confederate Monuments 1860-1920. At the time Lee made this statement about monuments, there were few Confederate monuments. By 1869 there were 52 Union monuments already erected. There were three Confederate monuments (two in 1867 and one in 1869). In the letter, Lee states he believes there is nothing he can add on the matter of his locations in the war — likely because many others could add that in the discussion.

This chart graphs the number of monuments/memorials identified to date. The top (blue) are the Union monuments with the Confederate monuments on the bottom (red) for comparison, based on the years the memorials were erected. It is the author's opinion while the source for the Confederate monuments is relatively complete, more Union monuments will be added with further research. The major organizations commissioning monuments in the post-war period are identified with creation dates along with the anniversaries of the War.

Furthermore, his comment to the "open the sores of war but to follow the examples of those nations who endeavored to obliterate the marks of civil strife" is directed either to monuments in general or specifically to the Union monuments. As noted, the Union monuments outnumbered the Confederate monuments by more than 17 to 1. It was not until 1914 did the monuments have equal numbers.

Ernest Everett Blevins works as a structural historian in Review and Compliance at the West Virginia State Historic Preservation Office and consults outside of West Virginia under Blevins Historical Research. He is a member of the Sons of Confederate Veterans serving as commander of the Robert S. Garnett Camp 1470, Charleston/Huntington Metro Area, WV and the Sons of Union Veterans of the CW.

The Four Generals of Woodlawn:

Gracie, Lovell, Deas and Tilghman

By Harlan D. Whatley, Historian, General Archibald Gracie Camp 985

Brigadier General Archibald Gracie

rchibald Gracie, Ir., was born in New York City, New York, on December 1, 1832. Gracie was born into a prominent New York family. His grandfather, a wealthy shipping merchant, built Gracie Mansion along Manhattan's East River. After studying in Heidelberg, Germany, Gracie graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1854, where Robert E. Lee served as commandant. Later, Gracie served on the northwestern frontier. In 1856, he resigned from the US Army, and joined his father in a cotton-brokerage business in Mobile, Alabama.

Young Gracie became involved in the state militia. When the secession crisis began, Gracie's father returned to

General Archibald Gracie

New York, but Archibald, Jr. remained in Alabama as a militia captain of the Washington Light Infantry. Young Gracie seized the federal arsenal at Mount Vernon, Alabama, under the orders of Governor Andrew B. Moore, before the state left the Union. Gracie and his troops joined the 3rd Alabama Infantry, and were sent to Virginia. After being promoted to brigadier general to rank from November 4, 1862, he fought in the Battle of Chickamauga, the Siege of Knoxville and the fighting at Bean's Station, where Gracie was seriously wounded. He recovered, and was assigned to duty under Gen. P. G. T. Beauregard, fighting on the Petersburg siege lines. Gracie was killed by Union artillery on December 2, 1864, while he was observing enemy movements.

His father had Gracie's body moved to New York City after the War ended; and Francis O. Ticknor wrote a poem of eulogy, entitled Gracie, of Alabama. He is buried in Section 23/24, Catalpa Plot, Lot 971-974 at Woodlawn Cemetery in the Bronx.

Major General Mansfield Lovell

ansfield Lovell was born in the District of Columbia, on October

General Mansfield Lovell

20, 1822. He graduated from West Point in 1842, where Robert E. Lee was commandant. Later, he was commissioned in the US artillery. He was brevetted and wounded in the Mexican War, then resigned from the US Army in 1854. He worked for the New York City street commission, and resigned in September of 1861 to become an officer in the Confederate army.

Lovell reported to Virginia and was appointed major general. On October 7, 1861, he took command of the defenses of New Orleans and helped create the Confederate River Defense Fleet. Having bragged about New Orleans' defenses, he unwittingly provided the information the Union needed to drive the Confederacy out of New Orleans. Lovell was then assigned to the command of an infantry division at the Battle of Corinth, Mississippi, which he led poorly. Fairing better at the engagement of Coffeeville, he was relieved of command for having lost New Orleans. Lovell requested a court of inquiry, which met in April of 1863. Although the Confederate court found him innocent of the charges of incompetence, he was not given any assignments for the rest of the War.

After the war, he returned to New York City, where he worked as a civil engineer. Lovell died in New York, on June 1, 1884. He is buried in Section 76, Fern Plot, Lot Middle 7811 at Woodlawn Cemetery in the Bronx, New York City.

Brigadier General Zachariah Deas

Born in Camden, SC, on October 25, 1819, Deas was well educated, both in South Carolina and in France. His family moved to Mobile, Alabama in 1835. He served in the Mexican War and afterwards amassed a considerable fortune in Mobile.

When the War began, Deas joined the Confederacy and was assigned to the staff of General Joseph E. Johnston at First Manassas. That fall, Major Robert B. Armistead and he raised their own regiment, the 22nd Alabama. After being commissioned colonel on October 25, 1861, Deas put up

$28,000 in gold for 800 Enfield rifles, equipping his own men. Deas assumed brigade command and on April 7, 1862, Deas was badly wounded. He recovered in time to join the Kentucky Campaign and fight at Munfordville and Salt River. After Murfreesboro, Deas received his brigadier general commission on December 13, 1862, and he took command of Franklin Gardner's brigade (19th, 22nd, 25th, 39th, and 26th-50th AL Regiments). The brigade fought at Chickamauga and routed Sheridan's Division. Deas lost 40 percent of his own command but also led the brigade at Chattanooga and Missionary Ridge. By January 1864, Deas was in command of the division, although a promotion to major general never materialized. Deas led his brigade at Atlanta and Jonesboro. He went with General John Bell Hood through Alabama into Tennessee, with the division now under Major General Edward Johnson. They fought in the Battle of Franklin, where Deas was slightly wounded. At Nashville, when General Johnson was captured, Deas again led the division on the retreat through Alabama. He was ordered to take his brigade against General William T. Sherman and was active in the Carolinas until taken ill at Raleigh.

Deas made his home in antebellum New York City and engaged in the cotton trade. He died on March 6, 1882, and is buried in Section 38, Elm Plot, Lot S 1/2 4294 Woodlawn Cemetery.

General Lloyd Tilghman

Born near Claiborne, Maryland on January 26, 1816, Tilghman's grandfather was a senator in the Continental Congress. He graduated from West Point in 1836 and became a civil engineer. He fought in the Mexican War, where he became the aide de camp for General David Twiggs, who commanded the 2nd Dragoons. Tilghman was a rail builder and primarily known for that.

After the Mexican War, he lived in Paducah, Kentucky, from 1852 to 1861. In December of 1860 Tilghman decided to join the Kentucky State Guard. Tilghman became a major in the Paducah Southwest Battalion. In April of 1861, Tilghman was commander of the western division of the Kentucky State Guard. On July 5, 1861, Tilghman and the 3rd Kentucky Infantry, Company D, joined the Confederacy.

On May 16, 1863, at Champion's Hill, Mississippi, Tilghman had a force of only 1,550 men, which was being forced back by six to eight thousand men of Grant's army. Tilghman dismounted and took command of a section of field artillery of the 1st Mississippi Light Artillery. He was in the act of sighting a howitzer when he was struck in the hip by a cannonball from the Chicago Mercantile Battery's number two gun. General Tilghman died in the arms of General Powhattan Ellis.

After the War, General Tilghman's widow brought their surviving children to New York City. In 1901, Tilghman was exhumed from his gravesite in Mississippi and moved to New York City. Tilghman is buried with his wife in Woodlawn Cemetery, Observatory Plot, Lot G-5.

Editor's Woodlawn note: Cemetery is one of the largest cemeteries in New York City and a designated National Historic Landmark. Located south of Woodlawn Heights, Bronx, New York City, it has the character of a rural cemetery. Woodlawn Cemetery opened during the War in 1863, in what was then southern Westchester County, in an area which was annexed to New York City in 1874. Covering more than 400 acres, it is notable as the final resting place of some well known figures in United States history.

General Gracie's son, Archibald Gracie IV, wrote a book about the Battle of Chickamauga in which his father had served. But his main claim to fame was surviving the sinking of the Titanic in 1912, but never recovered from the ordeal and died eight months later, the first survivor to pass. Gracie IV is also buried in the family plot at Woodlawn Cemetery. He wrote a book about the sinking but it was published after his death.

How Is The Error Taught Today Threatening Our Heritage?

By J Pat Baughman

Teaching Revisionist History Is A Threat To Our Freedom

The entire educational system, much like the corrupt media, has become a tool to influence our children as a stepping stone to far-left and even Marxist indoctrination. When the National Education Department was created, this powerful centralized agency made it far easier for an anti-southern, anti-Christian philosophy to produce what is now accepted as truth. In the following years, wave after wave of indoctrinated young minds could start managing our institutions from local school boards to cities to state and national governments.

As an example, we can consider the present-day common view of the South and the Confederacy's role in history. The schools from K through 12 to our universities have erased the records of the New England moguls who dominated the slave trade. Those very rich yankees involved have ALL been eliminated from history. The Maritime Records of that time clearly show the names of the slave ships (and subsequently the owners) which sailed out of Rhode Island, New York, Philadelphia and Boston harbors, exclusively, and they all flew the Stars and Stripes. This revisionist history supports the, so called, truth absolving the north and thereby supporting the condemnation of the Confederacy.

The reasons for eliminating the historical record is as simple as it is obvious. To understand the truth is to understand what was an accepted way-of- life in the mid-19th century. The records of that era threaten today's politically correct revisionist narrative wherein race and racism are being used by many corrupt politicians perpetuating deception. This big lie is used to separate us all from the truth while fostering a scheme to convert our democratic, capitalistic republic into a socialist, Utopian Valhalla of unlimited government.

History demonstrates Marxist schemes always terminate in dictatorship. Individual freedom is most certainly lost to domination by the privileged few at the top at the expense of the "common" citizens ... just as in Russia, China and Venezuela.

One practice at the root of this corrupt system is perpetuated today through the use of the Tenure System at colleges and universities. They offer left leaning applicants unlimited employment while refusing tenure to conservatives. If conservatives cannot become professors, then universities are free to become tools of indoctrination instead of their intended roles as sources of wisdom and truth. Any correct perception of the South, our people, our culture and our history cannot exist when our institutions of higher learning are corrupted.

Henry Clay Goodman

A Tribute to the Life and Service of a Confederate Soldier

By Sean R. Goodman

enry Clay Goodman Sr. was born September 5, 1845 at Boston, Bowie County, Texas. When he entered the world, James K. Polk was president, and the young Republic of Texas was a vast and sparsely-populated state awaiting annexation into the United States. Family records indicate Henry's birth took place a short while after the death of his father, believed to be Archibald Goodman. Possibly from Illinois originally, he came to Texas in December 1839, likely seeking land and opportunity. Shortly after his arrival, he was granted 320 acres of land in Red River County, situated in the northeast corner of the state bordering Arkansas to the east and Indian Territory to the north (7). Bowie County was established the following year from parts of Red River County, and it was there Archibald began his new life, probably as a farmer or cotton plantation owner.

Henry's mother was Mary, a South Carolina native whose maiden name has been lost. Just when she met and married Archibald Goodman is unknown, but after his sudden death in 1845, her time in Texas would be short-lived. After giving birth to Henry in September, the widowed Mary likely sold what remaining land she held. In early 1846, she left for Alabama, resettling in Robinson Springs, a small town in Autauga County north of Montgomery (4). There she very likely had friends or relatives she lived with, at least for a time, to support herself and her son.

Details and records from Henry's early years are scarce. Aside from his parents, little is known about his immediate family, and there are no known records of siblings. As a young child, he may have resided with relatives in Marshall County, Mississippi, but how long he remained there is not known (8-B). Like many children his age, he was probably brought up in an agricultural environment, learning the responsibilities of being a planter and working a farm. And, since formal education was still a rare privilege for many children at the time, it is possible Henry was home-schooled by relatives, or perhaps educated through a local church.

After several years as a widow, Mary Goodman eventually remarried Rev. Jesse Ellis, Jr. about 1854. A native of Chatham County, North Carolina, Rev. Ellis was a well-known circuit rider with the Methodist-Episcopal Church of Alabama. He was also a widower with twelve children from his first marriage. By 1860, Jesse and Mary Ellis resided in nearby Coosa County, by which time Rev. Ellis was unofficially retired from the ministry (8-A, Coosa County). Henry, however, was not listed as living in the household with them. At the time, he may have been attending a boarding or prep school in Mississippi, which Rev. Ellis may have provided for.

imagined that in just a year's time, his life — and the lives of all Southerners — would change drastically and forever.

Confederate Service, 1861 - 1863

When the War Between the States broke out in early 1861, fifteen year-old Henry Clay Goodman was one of many young men swept up in the fervor of secession, and he faithfully answered the call of duty to defend his Southern soil. Henry's service to the Confederate States of America began on May 9, when he enlisted in Company C of the 3rd Battalion Mississippi Infantry as a private at Vicksburg (5-B). Formed in late 1861, the 3rd Mississippi (not to be confused with the 3rd Mississippi State Troops under Major General T.C. Tupper) was under the command of Major Aaron B. Hardcastle, and had previously been part of the Mississippi Provisional Army (6).

The battalion was initially organized into seven companies, A through G, and assigned to General S.A.M. Wood's Brigade under General William J. Hardee's Corps in the Army of Mississippi (9). Company C, known as the Raymond Minute Men, was raised in Hinds County and was officially mustered into Confederate service by Major Hardcastle on November 13, 1861 at Vicksburg.

Henry's first combat experience with the 3rd Mississippi was the Battle of Shiloh, April 6-7, 1862, which was one of the bloodiest battles of the War. Hardee's Corps formed the left wing of the Confederate forces, with the 3rd Mississippi manning outposts along the Confederate battle lines (9). During the early morning hours of Sunday, April 6 the 3rd Mississippi engaged Union patrols for a short while, which may have been when Henry suffered his first wound of the War. Although no details were given, the wound was likely a gunshot to the arm or shoulder, as Henry's records indicated that he suffered partial paralysis for the rest of his life.

Following Shiloh, Hardee's Corps was reassigned to the Army of Tennessee, and fought at the Battle of Perryville on October 8, 1862. Although largely a Confederate victory, many soldiers were captured by Union forces as prisoners-of-war, and Henry was among those taken on October 9. At the time of his capture, he was described as sixteen years-old, five-feet-six inches in height, and had light hair, blue eyes, and dark skin. He was first sent to the USA general hospital at Lebanon,

UNKNOWN

By Mike Hollingsworth

As I pondered the numerous stones, Staring at the inscribed word, unknown, When abruptly, at a distance, I saw a phantasm, Soldiers humming the Confederate anthem.

A dozen saw I at first gander,
Unknown foot soldiers following their banner,
Flickering through the old gravestones,
Placid that underground were their revered bones.

Anxiously I approached the band of men, Their names I wanted for my pen, But as I queried, "Your names might be?" I only heard the drone of Dixie.

Could hardly believe that they had appeared,
I felt stressed but was unfeared,
Suddenly a sergeant emerged with a plea,
"Be not troubled, son," he said to me.

"Yea, do not be vexed, just let it be, For we died while facing the enemy. Love ones have joined us across that creek, Our whereabouts they no further seek."

"We thank you son for all you have taught, Vindicating the cause for which we fought. The 'unknown' label on our graves, Bothers us none for we're with the braves."

Quickly they came now gently fading away, Their spirit no more could I see this day. Courageous ancestors from long ago, Vanished once more in a Southern glow.

Charles W. Ramsdell, Dean of Southern Historians; Volume One: His Best Works

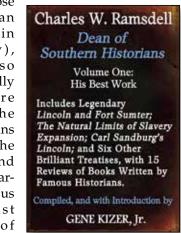

The introduction of this volume by Kizer is a complete review and accurate criticism of the state of our Republic 2020. Up to date for today's issues, this introduction would serve as a great history of our time when those in the future look back. The editor looks at present conditions and the challenge our future will hold. He identifies the issues and therefore suggests what needs to be done without stating it directly. This reviewer acknowledges Kizer obviously believes these sad attributes can be changed, or he would not spend time writing words when the ship is going down, never to be seen again. In all its various facets, Kizer clearly illustrates today's "Political Correctness." Media, academia, politics, are each summed up for those brave enough to see the obvious. This editor adds, "Even when it is not badly distorted, academic history has become, not the remembered story of human life but only a commentary on dogma.... It converts great segments of humanity into oppressors who deserve only annihilation." Does that sound familiar in today's world?

This is a dualistic volume which includes the above stated record of our times, and the historical view of Dr. Ramsdell from the first half of the 20th Century. Kizer has presented Southern history which is untainted by politically correct academics; writers who have courage to see the times and people as they lived in their society, not ours. In short, Kizer identifies history as a medium leading to "as it was," not as it can be used to forward today's political goals.

Included are thoughts George Orwell has his character Winston Smith express in 1984, "History has stopped. Nothing exists except an endless present in which the Party is always right. I know, of course, the past is falsified, but it would never be possible for me to prove it, even when I did the falsifications myself. After the thing is done, no evidence ever remains."

Although hard for this reviewer to read this about my beloved Virginia, Kizer, clearly exposes the University of Virginia's complete capitulation to not only those less than woke (in reality), but also the totally unaware left. The barbarians are at the door, and the barbarians are us (at least some of us)!

Although not a playbook to change things as they are, this volume identifies the problems and pleads for actions to stem the tide. This is an accurate statement of today's perils, a clear historical discussion of 1861-65, and a "take my stand" treatise which should be read by all thinking Americans, North and South.

All the above is just from the introduction. Following is a well-written history of the professional career of Charles W. Ramsdell. This segment is written by Wendell Holmes Stephenson who identifies Ramsdell as "Historian of the Confederacy." Author Kizer further identifies him as the "Dean of Southern Historians." Both names are earned. The reader will soon conclude they would thoroughly enjoy being a student in one of Ramsdell's classes at the University of Texas.

Parts Two and Three are a collection of nine Ramsdell's treatises. For anyone interested in learning supportive details in the defense of our Southern history, the reader will find an ample supply. The impossibility of slavery extending into the land acquired from the Mexican War, the situation of Ft. Sumter in 1861, the personality of Lincoln, etc. are all discussed. Compiler's notes include the thoughts of Republican James G. Blaine who relates the possibility of slavery extension in the Southwest, "... an imaginary negro in an impossible place." Heated questions about the extension of slavery outside of the Old South was a point of contention which contributed to the War.

Part Four presents fifteen book reviews by Ramsdell. The well-known books were written by historians of note. R. E. Lee: A Biography by Douglas Southall Freeman is the best-known book reviewed.

In another article (not printed in this volume), Kizer asks, "Do whatever you can. Give money. Speak. Write. Share information." To those ends, this book provides excellent points to utilize.

Kizer has presented a timely account of Southern history and preserved the contributions of a true Southern historian, Charles W. Ramsdell. From front to bibliography, a great read.

REPORT OF THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

Many of our younger members are banding together to become proactive by becoming leaders in our organization, bringing fresh new ideas, and getting involved. As a result, because of political pressure on the University of Mississippi, which young members were involved in, the monument was taken down in the middle of campus one day but it went back up the same day next to the Confederate cemetery on Campus. The university is spending more than a million dollars to quiet those members down to beautify and enhance the cemetery. This is a Victory! Another monument is going to private property in Louisiana and the Caddo Parrish is flipping the bill for it. Another Victory! By the time you read this article, we will be in the new National Confederate Museum at Elm Springs. This is a monumental victory for you the membership, but we still need your help. Have you joined the Friends of the National Confederate Museum? Have you given donations toward it to help pay for the overhead? This is YOUR monument and memorial to your ancestors. I know many of us have, but there is room for more as my

Baptist preacher always says at church.

The clouds will get darker as we fast approach National Election day in November as the left tries to create chaos in our nation to get what they want. Will you stand up and do your part, or will you fall victim to the real enemy, APATHY. The SCV can be a powerful force if we take time out to renew our dues, be proactive members in our camps, recruit more members. Has your camp utilized the "Friends of the SCV" as a recruiting tool? WE NEED all our sons and daughters of the south and this is a way to fill our ranks. Those people create a potential pool of full fledged members in the SCV to draw upon. Remember, before you ask, "What is the SCV doing?" Ask yourself, "What have you done for the SCV lately?" Always remember our charge and keep the faith.

ist free-thinker and former officer in the Union Army — the army who denied the people of the South the right to live under a government by the consent of the governed — had this to say about States' Rights: "The great stumbling block the great obstacle in Lincoln's way and in the way of thousands, was the old doctrine of States' Rights." Yes, the South's adherence to real States' Rights has long been a stumbling block in the way of those people who love an all-powerful big government, aka, tyranny. Lincoln's victory over "we the people" of the Confederate States of America did not just make all-powerful big government possible, it made it a reality. This reality is being dealt with each day by not just Southerners but by all Americans. No wonder General Robert E. Lee bemoaned the loss of REAL States' Rights as the harbinger of an "aggressive abroad and despotic at home" United States of America. This being true, it only gives us more reason to redouble our efforts in the SCV to get our message out to fellow Americans in general and to our fellow Southerners in particular. Liberty does not defend itself; we must do the work necessary to protect our Rights and secure the Rights and Liberty of future generations of Americans and Southerner.

THE SOCIETY OF THE ORDER OF THE SOUTHERN CROSS

Financial Assistance for Preservation Projects

The Order of the Southern Cross, founded in 1863 by Generals Polk and Cleburne, was originally created to provide financial assistance to the families of soldiers who had lost their lives in the service of the Confederacy.

The Order of the Southern Cross was re-established in 1979 as a philanthropic organization, dedicated to preserving our Southern Heritage through its Grants and Scholarship Programs. Since 1979, we have allocated more than $500,000 to these endeavors.

If you are an SCV Camp or a 501(c)3 organization seeking financial assistance to help fund a Confederate Preservation project, we encourage you to contact Grants Chairman Michael Harris at mikeharris329 @yahoo.com or you may visit our website at www.orderofsoutherncross.com for more information.

45th Captain Henry Wirz Memorial Service

The 45th annual Captain Henry Wirz Memorial Service sponsored by the Alexander H. Stephens SCV Camp in Americus, GA, will be held in the town of Andersonville, GA, on Sunday afternoon, November 8, 2020, at 3:00 PM. The public is invited to attend.

Guest speaker will be Mrs.

Lunelle McCallister. Mrs. McCallister, a 5th generation Floridian, is a noted speaker on the history of the Confederacy and her people. She has served as Founder and director of the Tampa Bay Sesquicentennial Commission, and is the Founding President of the United Daughters of the Confederacy Chapter in Temple Terrace, Florida. She is the Executive Director of "Save Southern Heritage," Florida Chapter.

Donation Request for Presidential Pardon

Please consider helping the descendants of Capt. Henry Wirz, Commandant of Andersonville Prison Camp (1864-1865), apply for a Presidential Pardon for him.

After the War, Captain Wirz was taken to Washington and tried before a Military Tribunal. He was found guilty of murdering Yankee prisoners (no body nor no prisoner name was ever given), and hung on November 10, 1865. Many historians have called the trial a national disgrace, and the most unfair trial ever held in the United States.

After the hanging, the Yankees cut off Captain Wirz' head, arms, and legs, and publicly exhibited the bones about the country. In 2020 some of the bones are still on public exhibit at a museum in Maryland.

The descendants of Captain Wirz and a number of their friends have acquired the services of Attorney David McCallister from near Tampa, Florida, to apply for the Pardon. Mr. McCallister has been involved in several lawsuits involving Southern civil rights plus city and county governments moving CSA monuments.

Mr. McCallister has volunteered his personal legal services at no charge. However, there will be a number of expenses in applying for the Pardon. These include a trip to Washington to determine the exact legal procedure, plus a second trip to take all the paperwork required for the Pardon request. Several trips to Andersonville Prison Camp (now Andersonville National Historic Site) to gather information are expected. A trip to Louisiana will be needed to discuss things with a number of Captain Wirz direct descendants living there, along with calls and correspondence with Colonel Heinrich Wirz (great-grand nephew) of Switzerland. A lot of other legal research by the attorney's secretaries will be needed.

We, friends of the Wirz family, have set a target of raising $8,500 to cover these expenses and any others that may come up. Thus far, a total of $4,500 has been donated by the Americus Camp and other individuals.

If you see fit to donate towards the expenses involved in the Presidential Pardon Request, please make the check out to "Capt. Wirz Book Account" and mail to James Gaston, 2220 GA Hwy. 30 West, Americus, GA 31719. Those making a donation of $50 or more will receive a copy of the booklet Andersonville Prison and Capt. Henry Wirz Trial.

Thank you in advance for your help.

James Gaston, Chairman of the annual Capt. Henry Wirz Memorial Service (held in Andersonville) for the past 20 years. For more information, call or text at 229-938-9115 or e-mail gaston7460@bellsouth.net

Headquarters needs more e-mail addresses

All, this is a request from membership at HQ. Of the 30,000 members in our database, we only have 15,000 e-mail addresses. In order to reach as many as possible with this format, I need everyone's correct e-mail address.

I'm asking all camps get e-mail addresses for all members. We understand not everyone has an e-mail address, but most do. Once they have, please e-mail the list to membership@scv.org. Doing this will help HQ serve everyone better. I thank you all for your service.

Museum artifact donations and Confederate images

The SCV is asking for worthy donations of Confederate and SCV historical items for our museum. Please contact us at exedir@scv.org for donations or loans before sending them to GHQ. We currently do not have room to store them, but we would like to have an idea of what to expect and plan for its display once the museum is open.

In addition, we would like to collect images of all our Confederate veterans. Please send images of your ancestor to membership@scv.org or PO Box 59, Columbia, TN 38402. Please annotate the name, rank, unit, and as much information as you can about the individual(s) you are submitting. These will be available for perpetual research for our visitors and members as well as use in the museum.

IRS 990N Submissions

It is time for camps to submit your IRS 990N electronically. Each camp has until 15 December to file online. Please reference this 990 User Guide from the IRS before filing: https://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/p5248.pdf

End of year giving to the SCV

To make gifts of stock to the Sons of Confederate Veterans, please contact our corporate portfolio managers at The Parker Group at Morgan Stanley. Ask for SCV members Drew or Stewart Parker at (931) 560-1900 or (866) 816-5595 or Stewart.Parker@morganstanley.com.

Thank you!

Estate Planning

Please consider placing the SCV in your will. Each state law is different so it is best to contact your lawyer or estate planner, but if you need assistance, please contact us at exedir@scv.org.

Dispatches From the Front

Just as Hitler had promised each of his conquests, from the occupation of Alsace and Lorraine, the Anschluss of Austria, and the absorption of the Sudetenland, each was to be his final demand. We all know what happened to Poland.

The State of South Carolina caved in to those who wanted to remove the Confederate Flag from atop the South Carolina Capitol. A agreement was reached which would place the flag near a monument on the Capitol grounds. This, the parties to the agreement said, was an acceptable compromise to all concerned. Then Gov. Nikki Haley knuckled under to the very people who had professed satisfaction with the previous compromise. The Flag must come down! Forget we were happy before. We want the flag gone altogether!

What Gov. Haley proved is she was like Stanley Baldwin and Neville Chamberlain. She had no stomach for any fight based on principles. This goes to proved politicians are too ready to wave the white flag. They are afraid to resist the threat of violence and the loss of political and economic power. For proof of this just take a look at the mayors and governors of Oregon, Washington, Minnesota and Illinois, among others in recent weeks. Looks a lot like appeasement to me.

If it comes down to what we as members of the Sons of Confederate Veterans want and what a lawless mob wants, who do you think will prevail? We know from experience craven politicians will bow before the altar of Antifa and kiss the feet of the socialist/Communist crowd.

As members of this organization, we can't engage in political activities, but we can work as individuals. We can vote. We can write letters and make phone calls. We can try to convince our friends and neighbors to join us in our fight. We can raise funds as individuals to take the fight to the courts. We cannot, like Neville Chamberlain, stick our heads in the sand.

We cannot believe anti-Confederate bigots when they tell us "this is our last demand. We will not do anything to violate this agreement. We will keep the peace between us." We cannot trust our opponents. We must act in our own best interests.

To quote Sir Winston Churchill, "Never, never, never, never give in — in nothing, great or small, large or petty — never give in except to convictions of honor and good sense. Never give in to force. Never yield to the apparently overwhelming might of the enemy. Never give in."

Tom Vernon Zebulon Baird Vance Camp 15 Asheville, North Carolina

Southern states seceded on Constitutional issues

To the Editor:

After reading letters from some of our members regarding not denying that slavery was the cause of the war, I felt compelled to write this letter.

The argument goes something like this: states which seceded mentioned slavery in their ordinance of secession. Let's clear up something right now when one makes that argument, the less informed take it to mean those states were worried the incoming administration (Lincoln) was going to emancipate their slaves, i.e., take away their slave property. If one digs deeper, they will find that was not their grievance. What they were talking about was not enforcing the Fugitive Slave Clause of the Constitution. It was a matter of principle. If this were allowed to go unchallenged, something else would be violated in the future.

As far as the seven states who first seceded, three of them (South Carolina, Texas, and Mississippi) mentioned the North ignoring the law as a reason for leaving the Union — especially the North's failure to extradite John Brown's raiders to Virginia as the law required.

The New Mexico territory was open to slavery for ten years, and there were only twenty-nine slaves there in 1860. That same year, only two slaves were in Kansas and fifteen in Nebraska, and this was after being open to slavery for ten years.

The South wanted slavery in the territories to maintain the balance of power, and the North wanted to keep slavery out of the territories to limit Southern agrarian power (and for free white labor).

Do the math here — 13 states secede, four mention slavery, and that's the cause of the war?

If the South were worried about their slave property, they would have remained in the union because the original 13th Amendment was going to protect it where it existed.

Jeff Wolverton Judah P. Benjamin Camp 2210 Tampa, Florida

Push the truth to everyone around us at all times

To the Editor:

Although I am a new member of the SCV, I have for many years studied the numerous factors which brought about the War Between the States.

Make no mistake, America-hating radicals who hold prominent positions within our educational and political systems will not rest until they have rewritten our history and silenced those who dare hold dear their heritage.

The means by which these organized individuals intend to achieve their goal is diabolically simple. They seek to destroy our will. A person without will is little more than a sheep waiting to become a meal of the predator. If you can destroy the validity of history, you will eventually destroy one's desire to seek the enlightenment of truth. When one's desire to learn is rendered inert, the person becomes comfortably apathetic. When this STD (Socially Transmitted Disease of the mind) engulfs one's spirit, the person, and then people progressively, can easily be manipulated and controlled, and this is the eventual goal of Marxism. Control begets power, and power begets wealth, and wealth begets more power. The cycle never ends.

Those who hate America will never defeat Baby Boomers such as myself, and they know this — so they do not expend their resources attacking us.

Instead, they seek to poison the apple while it's still fresh on the tree: our youth. The inherent nature of youth is such that children are the most vulnerable members of society. Why do you think schools teach children WHAT to think instead of HOW to think? A well-known communist leader once said he knew America could not be destroyed militarily, but he would do so by destroying our young generations.

If we remain vigilant and help our youth identify and understand the leftist propaganda seeking to destroy their intellect, we can prevail. Conversely, if we lose our will and succumb to the evil of apathy, they will win. Are you willing to allow the sacrifices of your forebearers to be flushed into the sewer of oblivion? I know of none who are. Together, each of us can make a positive impact upon the lives of everyone around us by offering the unvarnished truth, which is the one thing which frightens the leftists more than anything else. Let us remain steadfast, united and strong.

K. Hutchison General JO Shelby Camp 1414 Harrison, Arkansas

Learn to use the word 'Shermanized'

To the Editor:

This poem by L. Virginia French is taken from the booklet Lincoln As The South Should Know Him by O. W. Blacknall (1854-1918). It refers to Sherman's doings. Then I'll make a suggestion.

In a blaze of burning roof-trees, under clouds of smoke and flame,

Sprang a new word into being, from a stern and dreaded name.

Gaunt and grim and like a specter rose that word before the world,

From a land of bloom and beauty into ruin rudely hurled,

From a people scourged by exile, from a city ostracized,

Pallas-like it sprang into being — and that word is

"Shermanized."

My suggestion is that we all, each and every one of us, learn to use that word in reference to any and all disasDo you need subscription information or have a question? Are you moving? If so, please contact General Headquarters ters wherever and whenever they may occur. Examples would be the recent explosion in Europe, 9/11, plane crashes, fires, etc., etc. Use the word "Shermanized" to refer to any tragic event, anywhere in the world. If we learn to make it a part of our everyday vocabulary, our children will pick up on it, and it'll become one small way of educating the masses to the truths of the War.

A letter of thanks for looking after Forrest

To the Editor:

I would like to thank Commanderin-Chief Paul C. Gramling, Jr., the Forrest Family and the Sons of Confederate Veterans for taking care of General Nathan B. Forrest and Mary Ann Montgomery Forrest for their reinterment on the property of the SCV Headquarters at a later date. At least they both will be buried with dignity and respect.

As I understand, my ancestors were in the 1st Mississippi Partisan Rangers, known as Falkner's Rangers under the command of Colonel William Clark Falkner, which I understand was a part of General Forrest's Regiment which the general would send on missions to scout out the northern enemy. The general would send out spies, scouts and partisan rangers in all directions to see where the enemy was and how many of them.

So again a great job, Commanderin-Chief Gramling and the SCV! Deo Vindice!

Respectfully yours,

Grady Tipler Captain Sherod Hunters Arizona Rangers Camp 1202 Tucson, Arizona

Don't spend your money with people who hate us

To the Editor:

Cities, states, businesses, all depend on money to exist. Some of those businesses, cities, and even states are run by people who hate us, our ancestors, icons and history as well. Accordingly I refuse to do business with any of those entities and would encourage my fellow SCV members to join me in this effort.

A letter, e-mail, or call from an SCV member is futile as these people could care less what we think. When cities like Charlottesville, states like Virginia, or companies disrespect our heritage, our culture, our heroes, I notify the Chamber of Commerce of the location we will not spend our monies there. I remind them of trips we made to those locations and monies we spent in motels, restaurants, shops etc that will no longer enrich that community.

The War Between the States and our history had meant millions of tourism dollars, jobs etc., for these places.

When idiotic politicians and business leaders disrespect people, or groups like us, they should pay. What we need is a list of people, companies, and places who hate us.

I hope my compatriots will join me in boycotting those who hate us.

Who Carved Stone Mountain, by Donna Faulkner Barron and Kay Jones, you will not know the rest of the story.

Roy Faulkner, a country boy from the mill town of Porterdale, Georgia, became a man with a purpose. Mr. Faulkner's inherited strong work ethic and attention to detail powered him through his life, accomplishing any task to which he put his mind and heart. He was hired as a welder for one company, a tool and die man for another company, learning the trades on the job.

A chance meeting with George Weiblen, superintendent for the job of carving Stone Mountain, led Roy to apply for, and be hired for, the job, building the elevator trace and started his "climb" into the history books.

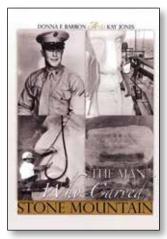

Gutzon Borglum began the work in 1915. Many were the issues, least of which was financing and deadlines, then World War I, which eventually led Mr. Borglum to destroy his plans and walk away from the project.

A new designer, Augustus Lukeman, created a model with scale of one to twelve which was used for the eventual completion of the project, with modifications by Mr. Faulkner.

Roy Faulkner began work in January, 1964. He designed and built an elevator shaft to rise about 600 feet! Mr. Roy saw workers come and make an effort and not complete their task. He would take matters into his own hands, even modified a torch to make it easier for the workers to be closer to their work and actually see what they were trying to do.

Roy had no formal training in sculpture, but had a head for math and an eye for anatomy. He knew horses and understood the proportions of the human body, which helped him get details correct. He loved a challenge!

This major undertaking as Chief Carver had many drawbacks. There were cold winter days when the rock was frozen solid, shoddvworkmanship that nearly cost Roy his life, watching friends slip away down the mountain to their demise. His only safety equipment used were a face shield and a hard hat!

"He credits his love for history, his love for his country, and the belief that he could, once again, do what needed to be done."

The Man Who Carved Stone Mountain is a small, easy read but it's full of pictures taken by the author and others to help the reader see the amazing process by which Mr. Faulkner completed the task and is highly recommended for anyone interested in Stone Mountain, Georgia!

Florida's Civil War: Terrible Sacrifices

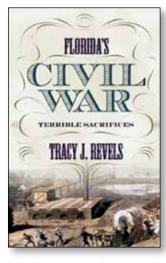

r. Tracy Revels' book, Florida's Civil War: Terrible Sacrifices has shone a light onto a subject that few have ever considered. One very rarely thinks of what the war meant to the people of Florida and what effect she had on the war itself, unless one is actually from Florida. I had a general knowledge that Florida was not a major theatre of the war, was used by blockade runners to a certain extent and seceded third after South Carolina and Mississippi, but didn't really know much else about the people who lived there just before and during the war. I must be honest, I know Walt Disney World much better. This book was really an eye opener.

Revels begins by breaking down the population of the state; free, enslaved, male, female, where the citizens came from, and occupations. And yes, where they came from played a major role in their loyalties. Since most people were not originally from Florida, they had a tendency to be loyal to their old home area. Those who were from SC and GA were generally loyal to the Confederacy, while those from up North were generally loyal to the Union. And yes there were a lot of them. She discusses Florida's political landscape of the time and Florida's steps to secession and preparations for war. This was of great help to understand how Florida's population reacted to the euphoria and optimism at the beginning of the war and how they then reacted to the deprivations and losses as the war continued. The author also goes into great detail explaining how Florida was still very much a frontier state. In many areas White and Black worked side by side to clear the land, drive the cattle, haul in the fish, etc. Even its plantations were rough and unpretentious with people widely separated from other families.

Throughout the book are quotes and passages of letters and diaries to give the reader a more intimate feel for the events which took place. Revels goes into great detail about Governor John Milton's reactions to the lack of support from the Confederate government in Richmond. She takes one from Pensacola and Florida's west coast, to Jacksonville and St. Augustine on the east coast and how the Confederacy really didn't do much to protect those areas. The book discloses how the loyal Confederates were generally forced to flee from their homes with what they could carry before the Union soldiers moved in. Not many people lived in south Florida at the time and Forts Jefferson and Taylor near Key West were held by the Union and were never challenged. The only area which was deemed somewhat safe was what is called "Middle Florida" which is the interior of the state and was the best farmland where the plantations were located.

Revels discusses Florida's 14,000 to 15,000 Confederate soldiers, the regiments they served in, and in which theatre of the war they fought. The men in Florida's regiments suffered losses just like other southern states and as the war progressed, there were fewer and fewer men to fill the empty ranks. For Florida, there came a time when there were essentially no more men to send.

I was excited to see Revels did not leave out the women and the work they did to support the war effort. From sewing flags and uniforms, knitting socks, raising money through theatricals and bazaars, speeches, letters to newspapers, the women were very active in their support even if they couldn't pick up a gun and fight. The author also writes about the roles women had to take when their men left to fight and how those men still sent directions home about how to do the work. She also wrote about how the Union sympathizers supported the Union soldiers as they came into an area.

In Revels' accounts about how the enslaved reacted to the war, unfortunately we have fewer first person accounts. She does use the accounts of former slaves who were taken by the WPA during the Great Depression and the few written accounts left by those who were enslaved. Revels discusses the Union's policies toward the enslaved who ran away when the first Union soldiers began arriving. The soldiers sent the runaway slaves back to the owners. Then she discusses the Union's move to undermine the Southern economy and to liberate those who were enslaved as they moved into new territory. The author does a great job describing the activities of the enslaved men and women, not as passive subjects to their own story, but having a say in what happens in their lives. The one thing I found a little jarring was how in some portions of the book, the war is about slavery and only slavery. But in another portion of the book she talks about how the Union soldiers felt they were just there to preserve the Union until after the Emancipation Proclamation.

No book about the role of Florida during the War Between the States would be complete without talking about the Battle of Olustee and what happened in the southern part of the state toward the end of the war. Revels does not disappoint. She gives a clear and concise description of the battle and what happened in Florida through the rest of the war.

In reading this book, I learned essentially Florida was very similar to the other Southern states. Divided loyalties, brother vs brother, most of the men marching off to war and never coming back or coming back missing something of themselves, enslaved striving for freedom as the war progressed and the deprivations of an enemy army conquering the land are all there. But Florida was also different from most of the Southern states. They were still a frontier and were finding themselves. Huge areas were uninhabited or had small populations of people just getting by. I just wish it had more than one map for those of us who are unfamiliar with locations in Florida. I would definitely recommend this book to anyone interested in learning more about Florida's role in the War Between the States.

Six Days in September A novel of Lee's Army in Maryland, 1862

After a string of victories in Virginia, General Robert E. Lee moved the Army of Northern Virginia across the Potomac River to take the fight to the North and relieve Virginia from the constant fighting of the past year. It was felt one major victory on Northern soil would bring England and France into the War on the side of the Confederacy.

However, Harpers Ferry becomes a problem when Lee has to leave part of his army to surround it while he and the rest of the army continues its move north. Then, the infamous lost order gives McClellan Lee's battle plans. The battle of Sharpsburg results in the bloodiest day in the history of the United States with Lee having to retreat back into Virginia.

Six Days in September takes all this into account as the author goes into detail with all the historical characters present, including Lee, Stonewall Jackson, Longstreet, D. H. Hill, and Henry Kyd Douglas.

The day-to-day activities of the common foot soldier is covered and the hardships experienced by the civilians living in the area are included in the narrative.

This is a very well written book and a very enjoyable read. Often history can be dry, so it is refreshing to read about the daily activities of the people who lived it, even if it is a work of fiction.

Henry Clay Goodman

Kentucky, where he remained for several weeks and was probably treated for his wounds. Then on November 18, 1862, Henry was transferred to the Union prison at Cairo, Illinois, aboard the steamboat Belle Creole (5-B). It is unknown exactly how long he remained in captivity, but his records showed he was "detached with sharpshooters" on January 25, 1863.

At that time, Henry was briefly assigned to Company B of the 15th Battalion Mississippi Sharpshooters, also known as Hawkins' Battalion. Formed in mid-1862, Hawkins' Battalion was commanded by Major A.T. Hawkins, and contained two companies of sharpshooters comprised of men temporarily detailed from other infantry regiments. These included the 16th and 33rd Alabama, the 32nd and 33rd Mississippi (which also encompassed the 3rd Mississippi), and the 44th Tennessee regiments (5-B). Although the unit went on to fight in several major battles including Murfreesboro and Chickamauga, it was later declared illegal by the Adjutant and Inspector General's Office in Richmond, and its men were eventually reassigned to their original commands.

Henry's service in Hawkins' Battalion was his last in a Mississippi unit. On March 9, 1863, just weeks after the Battle of Murfreesboro, he was discharged under age at Tullahoma, Tennessee. He was seventeen years-old.

Confederate Service, 1864 - 1865

After his discharge from the 3rd Mississippi Infantry, Henry briefly returned home to his mother and stepfather in Coosa County. This was probably a time of well-needed convalescence and recovery, as the War had already exacted a demanding toll on the entire nation and particularly the common soldier. Far too many already lost their lives, while countless thousands of others were permanently wounded or disabled. Yet this harsh reality did not deter Henry, who despite his own wounds was determined to continue fighting for his Southern homeland.

Less than a year passed at home before Henry decided to return to duty, and in February 1864 he enlisted in Goldthwaite's Battery, a small Alabama artillery unit (5-A). Goldthwaite's Battery had originally been organized as Semple's Battery in early 1862 at Montgomery, under the command of Captain Henry C. Semple. Following Captain Semple's promotion to major in 1864, the unit then came under the command of Lieutenant R.W. Goldthwaite.

At the time of Henry's reenlistment, Goldth-waite's Battery was stationed at the Confederate winter quarters at Dalton, Georgia, where the unit was preparing for action in the Atlanta Campaign. Throughout 1864, Goldthwaite's Battery fought extensively in Georgia and Tennessee, including the battles of Jonesboro, Resaca, Atlanta, Franklin, and Nashville (1). Henry's records showed he was wounded again at some point, although no specific details or his individual assignments were given. Considering his injuries and paralysis, it is possible he was unable to return to the front lines, and he may have instead served in a support role such as supply or logistical operations.

Despite heavy losses and an increasingly dismal outlook for the South, Goldthwaite's Battery continued to fight valiantly for the remainder of the War, eventually surrendering at Augusta, Georgia, in April 1865 (1). Just weeks later on May 1, Henry was paroled at Hamburg, South Carolina, officially ending his Confederate service. The War was over, and it was time for the young veteran to return home for good.

Later Life

Following his discharge from service, Henry returned home to Alabama, where he once again lived with his mother and stepfather in Coosa County. Although the War itself was over, the long-term effects of it were not. For Southerners everywhere, there was no choice but to start rebuilding their lives, families, and homes with what little they had. And Henry Goodman did just that.

After Rev. Ellis died in April 1866, Henry resided with his mother in the newly-established Elmore County, which was formed from parts of nearby Coosa, Autauga, and Tallapoosa Counties. It was also where they would call home for the rest of their lives. On January 16, 1868, he married Morning Angeline Harwell, an Alabama native whose family was deeply rooted in the Montgomery area. Henry worked primarily as a farmer, and for many years, they lived in the small town of Good Hope (8-A, Elmore County). There they raised a large family of six children: Oscar Julian (b. May 20, 1872), Jessie Beulah (b. July 16, 1876), Walter Leonard (b. August 12, 1878), Victor (b. October 27, 1880), Grover (b. February 23, 1887), and Henry Clay Jr. (b. December 13, 1888). Family records also mention three other children which sadly did not survive.

Soon after Henry and Morning married, he became deeply involved with the Methodist Church of Elmore County, particularly China Grove Methodist Church in Wetumpka. At the time, Methodism was spreading rapidly throughout much of the South, and his dedication to it may have directly resulted from the influence of Rev. Ellis in his life. He went on to become a devout and official member of the church, performing marriages and ingraining the faith and its teachings in his family and future generations.

In August of 1885, Henry's mother died at about eighty-three years old. By all accounts she was a strong and highly-esteemed woman, and there was no doubt that Mary Goodman Ellis died very proud of her only son.

By about 1890, the Goodman family was residing in Wetumpka, the county seat of Elmore, where Henry was already regarded as a distinguished and highly-respected member of his community. In addition to his involvement with the Methodist church, he was a member of several local civic groups, including the Alliance Fair Association and the Elmore County Camp of United Confederate Veterans. He was also heavily involved in local politics by regularly sitting on grand juries, serving as an election delegate and county committee member, and eventually being elected as a local countyman (2). Politically he was described as a Populist, and in January of 1896 he ran for tax collector of Elmore County as a member of the People's Party.

Henry's standing and civic involvement in the community were so well-known that on several occasions, just his presence in town was mentioned in local newspapers. They usually described him as shaking hands with citizens or circulating among his many friends (2). Even his hog-hunting skills went no less-noticed, and led some of his fellow Elmore County citizens to question whether anyone could best him.

Henry Clay Goodman Sr., Confederate veteran and father, passed away at his home in Wetumpka on June 21, 1910, after battling a nearly year-long illness. He was laid to rest June 23 at nearby China Grove Cemetery, alongside his mother. In his memorial in the Alabama Christian Advocate, he was remembered as a devoted and consistent Christian and a faithful member of Ramer Methodist Church, where his oldest son, Rev. Oscar J. Goodman, was pastor (3). He was admired and respected by all those who knew him, and he exhibited all the characteristics of a true Southern gentleman — pride, faith, loyalty, courage, generosity, humbleness, and devotion to family and friends.

Today, the descendants of this brave Confederate soldier honor his life and service, and proudly carry on his name and his memory.

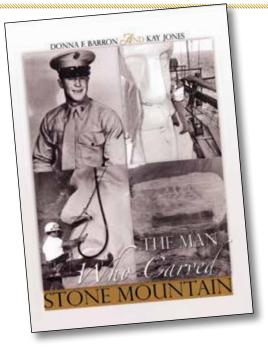

Sean Goodman is the great-great grandson of Henry C. Goodman, and a member of the Norfolk County Grays Camp 1549.

BE A MAN AMONG MEN!

Join the Sons of Confederate Veterans

We of the Sons of Confederate Veterans (SCV) who ride motorcycles have banded together into a special interest group within the organization. Members of the SCV are most welcome and encouraged to join even if they do not have a motorcycle (dismounted cavalry) at the time of submitting the SCV Mechanized Cavalry Application. We currently have one annual national meet, around the second week of June, which rotates to each host state each year. Members living near each other are encouraged to gather on a more frequent basis to attend camp meetings, dedications, re-enactments, and other SCV and UDC events together. Even rides for fun are good to hone the skills and fellowship of the South's new Mechanized Cavalry!

We have "Back Patches" that you may wear, if you wish, at appropriate places and times. Had the motorcycle been in existence during the War Between the States, our ancestors would certainly have utilized that mode of transportation. We are then the present day mechanized cavalry, Confederate States of America, on-going. There is a one-time application fee of $100.00 to cover an attractive back patch. This fee also helps us pay for the expenses of the group and membership activities. There are currently no annual dues or fees. We are a Heritage group. We are not a motorcycle club. We follow a set of standing orders necessary to uphold the ethics and values of our organization.

education to human behavior." All of life's conflicts were to be resolved within the code of Christian gentility. The idea was articulated by Thomas Nelson Page. He wrote about his father, "To be a ... gentleman was his first duty; it embraced being a Christian and all the virtues."

This Southern Code was exemplified in the lives of the Southern people. One Northern classmate of John Pelham at West Point said, "He was a gentleman in the highest sense of the term." The consideration of John Pelham's behavior or any Southern gentleman of that era must take into consideration the matter of honor or the Southern Code.

Many who do not understand the Southern Code disparage it by name-calling. For instance, one has called this code a "Cult of Honor" engrossed in death. Those given over to hate-mongering abolitionism have fanaticized, fictionalized, and falsified the truth about the South for their own agenda. Southern people should not force themselves into this fake mold in order to be perceived to be acceptable to such fabricators. Remember Satan is the father of lies! There is an entire genre of newspeak among those who have devoted themselves to smearing our Southern ancestors. One fantasizing contemporary historian concluded the exceedingly high murder rate in the United States is a joint result of the "cult of honor" of the antebellum South and its use of lethal force to control slaves. He also claimed this cult was involved in the frontier gun culture which has left a legacy of gun ownership. To squeeze this lemon again, this fictionalizer claimed the current passion for gun ownership probably descends from a fear of a slave revolt. He estimated the high murder rates now are found only in the Southern tier of states from California to Virginia (does he know the original Confederate States of America?), also including those areas further north where there are large urban areas much of whose population emigrated from the South (one gets the idea that this person's estimation, all criminal elements are Southern). However, the Iowa and Dakota murder rates are no higher than in Canada or Europe. Such myth-makers believe the antebellum South to be the evil empire behind all our modern woes. The South has been so mythologized as to lose its true identity, which the Sons of Confederate Veterans must not allow to be the norm. We are to "honor our fathers and mothers" in obedience to the Lord.

The Southern Code must not be vandalized by today's Southern because of misinformation. The Christian graces and the matter of honor which had such a vital impact upon our forefathers, by the grace of God, must be remembered in a proper context. And we must remember to "Render therefore to all their dues ... honour to whom honour." Thank God for the Southern Code of the antebellum South! We need to return to it by the Lord's help.
